

Ibai Linacisoro and Nuria Tornero Winners of the Combined Event.

The Spanish team of the U16 category stays very strong in the XXI Borrufa Trophy. Today, as far as the Spaniards go, was a huge success with the extraordinary performance of the girls team coupled with Ibai Linacisoro's victory. He managed to beat the overall winner of the category Jan Straka, who in today's combined event had to console himself with second position. Jan Sasplugas was third after a great performance in the Special Slalom (SL).

Amongst the girls, Nuria Tornero was the most consistent skier in both specialties. The fight for second position overall, between the Russian skier Polina Ivanova and the Andorran skier Noemí Mora, was a very close one. In the end, it was Ivanova who edged in front but only by 4 hundredths of a second.

The U16 category skiers started the combined event by racing the Special Slalom and then going on to the Supergiant slalom (SG).

It was the second podium for Jan Sasplugas, but it has been nonetheless a tough day: After finishing in third position in the SL, it wasn't easy to determine which strategy would be better. I got a bit confused during the SG, but at the end I kept my spot on the podium, which was the goal.

Today's winner, Nuria Tornero, raced two almost perfect heats, but she still found some flaws in her performance: I think I did especially well on the SG. At the end of the SL I was a bit indecisive. Afterwards, when I checked the ranking, I could see I hadn't lost too much time.

Noemi Mora has climbed the podium twice today. The Andorran skier was very happy with her performance: It was a pity to lose the second overall position by such a small time difference. Anyway, I'm happy with how it all went; I have to keep up the good work to improve even more.

Danish skier Marcus Vorre was the big surprise winning the SG. He was one of the few skiers that descended in less than a minute, together with Kevin Courrieu and the Spaniards Ibai Linacisoro and Antonio Samaniego. Vorre explained: I prefer speeding specialties; what's-more, the snow on the slope today was how I like it.
